Natura 2000

Europe's nature for you

The 'Habitats' and 'Birds' Directives

The Birds' and Habitats' Directives form the European conservation legislation. Together, they represent the most ambitious initiative ever undertaken to safeguard our natural heritage over so large an area. They safeguard biodiversity whilst taking account of regional requirements into account.

At the heart of this legislation lies the Natura 2000 network, an ecological patchwork of sites, which come together like a jigsaw to provide a safe haven for Europe's most endangered plants, birds and other animals. Around 300 birds, 450 animals and 500 plants depend on Natura 2000 for their survival.

Engaging people at the heart of Natura 2000

Natura 2000 fully recognises that man is an integral part of the natural environment and the two work best in partnership. In the Natura 2000 Network are valuable places where they have been managed over centuries. These sustainable landscapes are a source of pride and work in progress for the people who live in them.

where the air is clean and the water is fresh. It offers clean, beautiful places for us to enjoy, enjoy and relax in. It reduces air pollution, noise and other environmental stresses. Above all, nature provides a vital source of income and jobs for countries throughout Europe, which is essential for national resources in a sustainable manner.

land uses such as intensive agriculture and as well as major infrastructure developments the steady spread of urban areas.
